Poulomi Saha

Our twenty-first century is passing through the most troublesome and inescapable crisis due to the unexampled challenges that are given by Covid-19 pandemic. The novel Coronavirus has transfused worldwide and generates enormous psychological disorder as well as traumatized condition in day-to-day life. This article will be an attempt to find out how the term social distancing works with the domestic space of society and how terror, violence and trauma has shaped the identity of most of the people. The present article focuses especially on women, migrants, children etc., though Covid-19 affects the globe in an unparalleled manner.

'Endemic' is a disease that is restricted to a certain place, territory or demography whereas 'epidemic' is a disease that besets numerous persons at the same time and is expanding from one to another in particular residence. when an epidemic reaches more than that country's margin the
